Firefighters

are good at everything but putting out the flames of love...

Samantha Rowe's never scared of anything, even when she should be. Now she's opening a martial arts classroom in tiny Darling Bay, helping women protect themselves from attack. She's fearless in everything except love. The only thing she really needs is an attacker to help her train the students.

Hank Coffee is way more used to putting on a fire helmet than a padded one, but when Samantha needs help with her new business, he's willing to be kicked and hit in the name of helping someone stay safe. Safety's his thing, after all, and he's good at protocol--dotting his i's and crossing all the t's. When it comes to Samantha, though, Hank is losing his heart and not sure how to get it back.

How will Samantha deal with this full-frontal assault on her heart. Will Hank find a way to make Sam follow the rules of the game?

About the Author

When

Lila Ashe isn't working at the firehouse, she's writing the hot firefighters she knows so well. She's lived in the big city long enough to know she craves the stars at night, and living on the rugged northern coast of California is just right. Fans of Kristan Higgins, Bella Andre, and Barbara Freethy will settle right into California's Darling Bay and Florida's Cupid Island. Lila is happily married and addicted to all things romantic, including surprise getaways to San Francisco for clam chowder or overnight trips to Napa for wine, but she's also found that being romantic at home can be even more exciting.
