DUPLICITY---THE STAND-ALONE PREQUEL TO THE "GIRL UNDERCOVER SERIAL":

Annika's real name is Gabi and she isn't really a trainer from Sweden but a rookie cop from L.A. She's working at a Manhattan health club to help the feds nail an elusive, covert drug lord. In order to do so, she must infiltrate his world by becoming his trainer.

In the hope of acquiring information that might help her mission, Gabi befriends one of the drug lord's soldiers, the tormented, handsome Paul Medina. Unfortunately, the closer she gets to him, the more feelings she develops for him. Soon, she feels so strongly that she starts to question whether she has what it takes to destroy the brutal drug lord and his empire in which the body count increases by the day...

NOTE: This book used to be part of the L.A. Girls Series and is now part of the Girl Undercover series. It's a stand-alone, 76,000-word novel with no explicit sex scenes.
