School Dot Com by Judith Z. Marrs ISBN B00RPUBEQ2

School Dot Com involves teachers, coaches, students and family members of faculty members. Many subplots exist within the main plot, and several twists and turns occur to keep the reader turning page after page to see what happens next. Relationships are believable, genuine and interesting. A new coach teacher comes to the school and upsets a tenured teacher since she knows what coaches usually teach. The same classes she teaches like social studies. She is angry and ready to start summer vacay, and the principal asks her to help Coach Brady over the summer, but she plans on spending it with her hippie parents on their commune where she can obtain peace and quiet. Coach Brady ends up at the farm with her along with her twin brother and his fiancée. There goes the peace. Coach Brady is headed for the beach where old money families spend summers, and subplots occur that are beyond his control. Santana, who has been asked to help Coach Brady during the summer is not happy with peace taken from her summer. The two teachers' families become involved, and a major twist occurs, unexpected. The book ends with another twist. This book is a real page turner. Enjoy!
